Good afternoon Shane,

To clarify, here's why the attestation forms are required:

- Removal request: Per Item 3 of the Attestation ("Removal of Third-Party References"), you must formally request the removal of all references to your home(s) (names, addresses, images, links, descriptions) from the Vanderburgh House website and related materials. Please send us proof that you have made this request.
- Operator attestation: Please provide a signed attestation from [redacted] as she is listed publicly as the operator.

If a third party is using your home's name or information without your consent to imply affiliation, this is a concern because, if your home becomes certified, it would appear to be affiliated with that third party. At this time, any home affiliated with Vanderburgh House does not qualify for certification.

We are not denying certification because you cannot control a third-party website. Certification is on hold pending:
(a) Signed attestation(s)
(b) Your documented removal request
(c) [redacted] signed attestation

Please let me know if you have any questions.

Sincerely,
Silvia

Good evening,

Below are the responses to your concerns:

[redacted] - Thank you for your clarification. The intent of this section is to confirm the independent operation of the sober home. We understand that you may work with third-party service providers like insurance agents, marketing companies, or website platforms—that's completely normal and allowed. However, these third-party organizations typically do not participate in the actual management or operations of the home. If any of these entities were actively involved in running or making decisions for the home, then they would need to be disclosed as additional owners or operators. This clarification helps ensure transparency about who is truly responsible for the home's daily operations.

[redacted] - If any third-party website or platform suggests a connection—whether through branding, claims of affiliation, or operational ties—it needs to be corrected or removed. Until those links are fully resolved, the home cannot be considered for certification

[redacted] - The reference to "absence of third-party affiliation" specifically refers to removing all mentions or listings of your home from the Vanderburgh House website or any affiliated sites. We're asking for your cooperation in making sure that your home is represented independently.

[redacted] - The statement is not about charging legal fees arbitrarily. It simply clarifies that if we receive credible information suggesting your home is not operating independently — after you've signed the attestation — and it turns out that material information was knowingly withheld, we may need to initiate a formal investigation, which could include legal consultation. In that specific case, you could be responsible for reasonable legal costs related to investigating the failure to disclose. This is a standard accountability clause to ensure transparency and integrity in the certification process.

[redacted] - To clarify: for your specific home, the form references Vanderburgh House because we are already aware of concerns about a potential affiliation. For other owners, the form is a general attestation confirming independent operation, with no specific organization named — unless there is a known concern. This same process applies to all operators and anyone acting as the operator on behalf of an owner. If the owner is not the person running the home day-to-day, the operator must also sign the attestation. Our goal is to ensure transparency and consistency in certification

[redacted]
- Thank you for the clarification. However, based on the information we've previously shared with you, [redacted] has been listed as the operator of the Rogers Home on the Vanderburgh House website. While she may now be referred to as a mentor, she was previously identified as the house manager, and her name remains publicly associated with the home's operation. Given this, she is required to complete a disclosure form, consistent with the documents we've provided.

[redacted] - We understand your concerns. However, as part of the certification process, we require completed attestations to confirm there is no operational affiliation with Vanderburgh House or any third-party entity. Once we receive the signed documents and have a clear understanding of the home's independent operation, we will be able to move forward with your certification. Until that time, your application will remain on hold

Sincerely,
Silvia

Good afternoon,

I've attached the attestation forms we will need—one from you as the owner, and one from [redacted] to confirm she is not affiliated as the operator under Vanderburgh House.

Please forward the appropriate form to [redacted] and ask her to complete it and email it back to us directly.

Also, please note that the email address we currently have for [redacted] is the same as yours. For compliance and confidentiality reasons, we need a separate email address for you as the owner. If there are ever any grievances or confidential matters involving [redacted] we need to ensure she does not have access to communications intended solely for you.

Let me know if you have any questions.

Thank you,
Silvia
