About This Recovery Home

Toll Gate Sober House is sober living for women in Warwick, Rhode Island, located at 552 Toll Gate Road in the center of the state, a short drive south of Providence. It is a ten-bed house with two private rooms and eight shared beds, so it runs smaller than most. There is a good-size parking lot, coin-operated laundry on site, free high-speed WiFi, air conditioning and a computer station, and counseling, grocery stores, parks and transit are nearby. A trained House Mentor lives at the house and leads it day to day for Kayaly Recovery, the chartered operator. Women here keep up with meetings, work, school and their other obligations while living under clear expectations, and drug screens happen at random. This home has a long record of service to the Warwick and Providence recovery communities. Up the road at 560 Toll Gate Road, Kayaly: Toll Gate Sober House offers twelve beds for women under the same operator.

Toll Gate Sober House — Warwick, RI

Vanderburgh SOBER LIVING

Life in the House

Toll Gate is a house for ten women in Warwick, run under Frank Moreau, who has served on the executive of the Ocean State Coalition of Recovery Houses for more than ten years. The home has served women in Warwick and Providence for many years, and many guests choose it because of that reputation. The women here support each other through every stage of recovery.

A House Mentor lives in the home, and the house leadership is trained in sober living practices. A new guest can expect structure and support from staff who are present, a household of women who know the first weeks, and random drug and alcohol screening.

What the Structure Looks Like

- Ten women, in a small house where everyone is known
- Trained house leadership, present in the home
- Drug and alcohol tests at random, for every guest
- Years of service in Warwick and Providence, behind the home's reputation
- A House Mentor who lives at Toll Gate, for day-to-day support

About Kayaly Recovery

The Toll Gate Sober House in Warwick, Rhode Island offers a quality living environment for women in recovery. The home is operated under the leadership of Frank Moreau.
